Welcome to the 2022 CESSE CEO Meeting!

I am excited to be here with so many dear friends and colleagues at The Westin Annapolis—an inspiring venue for a return to our in-person annual gathering! Our program co-chairs Nan Broadbent, Executive Director at Seismological Society of America, and Dr. Norman Fortenberry, Executive Director at American Society for Engineering Education, have worked diligently to develop a timely and highly relevant program for you.

As STEM society leaders, we have faced many challenges during this pandemic and more uncertainties lie ahead. I encourage you to use this time to actively engage in the sessions and conversations and to kindly share your insights and experiences with your peers. The more each of us participates, the more we will all fully benefit from this truly unique event.

I’d like to thank our generous and loyal partners for their support. Without them, this event would not have been possible. Their knowledge, materials, and provisions will enrich our opportunities to learn with and from one another. A special thank you goes to The Westin Annapolis for hosting our meeting.

Lastly, THANK YOU, my fellow CEO colleagues, for being here! Our CESSE CEO meeting is renowned for actionable learnings, unparalleled networking, and trusted relationships, and your presence is the essential factor in making this an inspiring experience. I look forward to connecting with each of you throughout our time together.

With gratitude and warm regards,

Bob Chalker, MBA CAE
CEO, Association for Materials Protection and Performance (AMPP)
Welcome to the 2022 CESSE CEO Meeting!

After two years, it’s wonderful to reconnect with old friends again while meeting new colleagues in person. During our next few days together, you will discover that the CESSE CEO Meeting is one of the most valuable experiences in your CEO journey.

As CEOs, we are committed to developing our own competencies so that we can influence productive change in our organizations. Throughout the program, we will focus on impactful ways to pursue meaningful social change in STEM societies. Our informed panelists will discuss their personal and professional experiences on pertinent topics including effective recruitment and training of Board members, managing financial reserves, and understanding your members’ needs. There will also be plenty of time to share fun, candid conversations about our experiences as CEOs!

You are now part of a close community made up of your STEM society peers who share their concerns in the comfort of a safe and supporting environment. We encourage you to share your ideas and experiences with others and use this time and space to reflect and grow as a leader. We look forward to having you participate in reinvigorating sessions, honest and open discussions, and exciting networking opportunities!

Thank you for joining us,

Nan Broadbent
Executive Director at Seismological Society of America

Dr. Norman Fortenberry
Executive Director at American Society for Engineering Education

WHEN YOU MEET IN DETROIT, YOU GET TO MEET DETROIT.

Detroit is committed to ... Detroit. When you meet here, you’re supporting the same things we are: the sustainability of our local economy, authentic community and natural spaces.

Our downtown convention center, Huntington Place, is home to a 10,000 square foot living green roof that helps cool and heat the building, reducing the facility’s carbon footprint. Hosting a meeting here, you’re participating in authentic, community-driven tourism that integrates your attendees into the city’s social and cultural fabric. You’re investing in businesses like DOSE of Detroit, a retail collective that provides emerging BIPOC brands a brick-and-mortar place to sell their products.

If sustainability is as important to you as it is to us, Visit Detroit is here to help you select the right venue, the perfect restaurant and help create that memorable experience for your group to see, feel and support the real Detroit.

This session will focus on several facets of social justice and how they interface with the work and missions of STEM societies. Organizational missions both impact and are impacted by broader social issues and movements. Throughout this session, we will discuss communications, society history and mission, and venue selection. How and when should societies take a stand on social justice issues? How do organizations move beyond pro forma statements and into meaningful action? STEM society CEOs will share their experiences through case studies.

10–10:30 am Morning Break
Capitol Foyer
Hosted by Tourism Calgary

10:30 am–Noon Bicycling with Your Board: Effective Recruitment and Training

Panelists
Karen Horting, MBA CAE, Society of Women Engineers
Chris Jannuzzi, The Electrochemical Society
Tracy Kuntz, MBA CFP, Towneley Capital Management, Inc.
Barbara Lange, former Executive Director of SMPTE, Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers
Associations use various approaches to managing their reserves. This session will provide case studies on several approaches while addressing questions such as:

- How much in reserve is enough?
- What adjustments to managing reserves had to be made in response to the pandemic?
- Are there different strategies to managing reserves based on organizational size?
- How can a CEO manage a Board reluctant to save, spend and/or invest reserves?

Session speakers include an external expert and CESSE CEOs from small, mid-sized, and large associations. This important presentation will include a moderated panel discussion that will integrate audience participation following brief presentations.
